

Aging Policies in China:

From "Rights Protection" to "Integrated Development"

Jian SONG
Center for Population and Development Studies
Renmin University of China

songjian@ruc.edu.cn

Active Aging

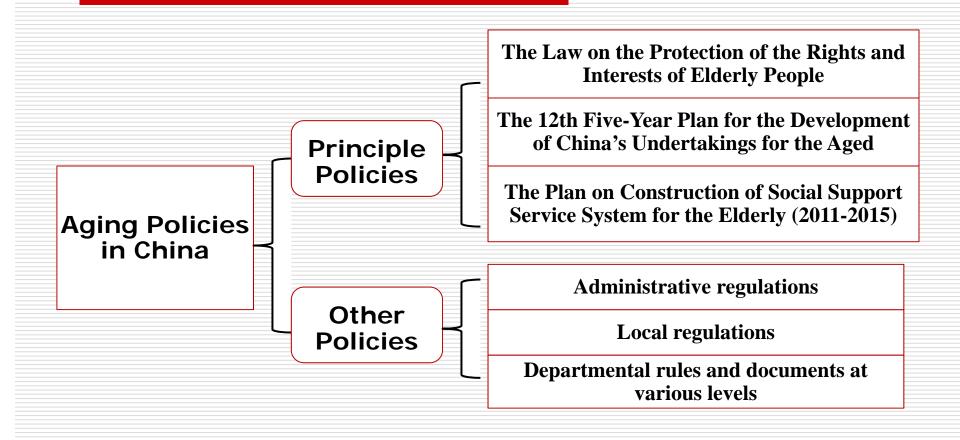

□ allows people to realize their potential for physical, social, and mental wellbeing throughout the life course and to participate in society according to their needs, desires and capacities,

□ while providing them with adequate protection, security and care when they require assistance.

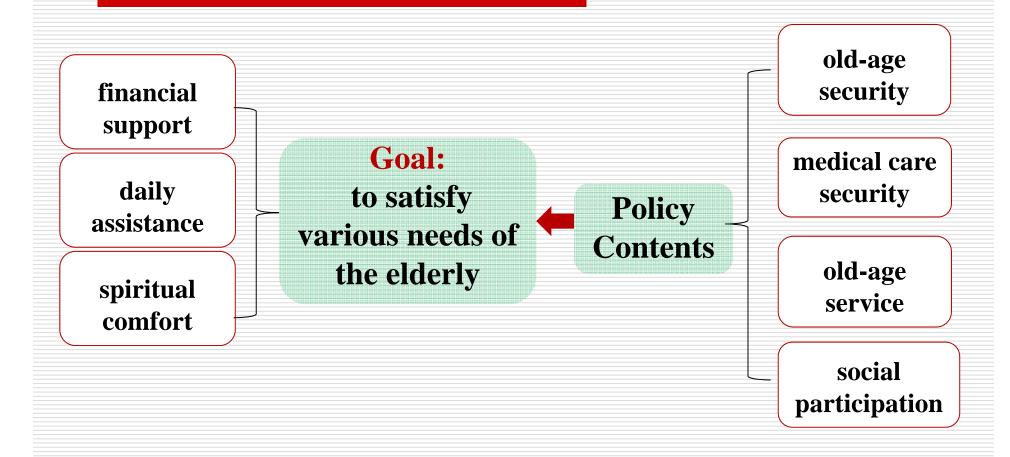

Active Aging Polices

- ☐ To respect the natural law of human beings with the advancement of age and help people of all ages to live in a free and comfortable condition that fits them most;
- ☐ To survey the whole process of human development over the life course and help people to deter or reduce side effects of aging.

Preliminary Policy and Legal Framework in China

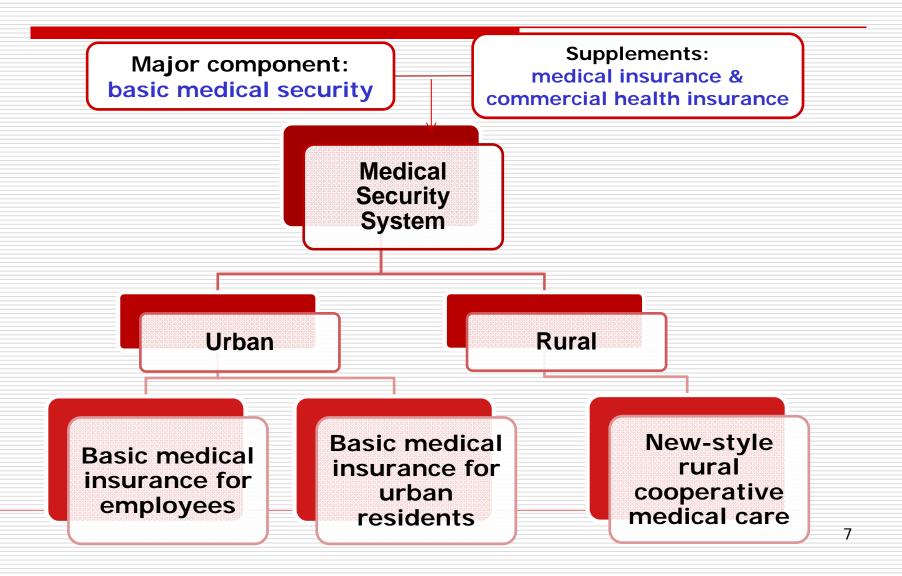

Goal and Contents of Aging Policies in China

Basic Old-age Security System

- □ Institutionally achieved full coverage of all population groups and helped to lessen the families' financial burden.
 - Basic pensions of enterprise retirees on continuous rise;
 - Minimum living-standard security system established for the poor;
 - "The five guarantees (food, clothing, medical care, housing and burial expenses)"for eligible rural seniors;
 - Special subsidies for the seniors of family-planning families.

Medical Care Security System

Medical Care Security System (cont.)

II

III

Effective safeguard of the elderly's rights to basic medical and health services despite his/her locality;

Steady quality improvement of professional services from concerned institutions at all levels;

Prevention and control of chronic diseases, medical and health care for disabled seniors and mental health of the elderly.

Old-age Service System

- ☐ To enhance self-reliance of seniors and promote their life quality;
- Based on aging at home, supplemented by community services and supported by social organizations.
 - construction of public and home environments: taking physiological features of the elderly into account;
 - construction of old-age service system: beds for old-age support, professional old-age nursing institutions, old-age service teams.

Social Participation of the Elderly

☐ To create conditions to fully utilize expertise of the elderly.

Professional old-age organizations

Old-age activity centers or stations

> Nongovernmental organizations

To encourage active social participation

Conclusion

- □ Aging policies in China are putting more emphasis on integrated development of the elderly, in addition to their rights protection.
- □ For different cohorts of older people, dynamic policy design are needed.
- Among present-day older people:
 - the younger old are encouraged to participate in the society and spend their third age actively and happily;
 - the older old are able to live longer time independently in their own house.

#